The Cantos by Ezra Pound is a long, incomplete poem in 116 sections, each of which is a canto. Most of it was written between 1915 and 1962, although much of the early work was abandoned and the early cantos, as finally published, date from 1922 onwards. It is a book-length work, widely considered to be an intense and challenging read.

Cantos III-VII take place in the Mediterranean, where Pound draws on classic mythology and the Renaissance in order to portray themes of clarity and light. These cantos are indicative of Pound's Imagist style. Cantos VII-XI tell the story of Sigismondo Pandolfo Malatesta, a 15th century poet and patron of the arts.

1915, and the first three Cantos were published in Poetry magazine in 1917. Over the ensuing decades, Pound would rewrite the beginning to the poem, and The Cantos would follow various threads. The most celebrated of these are the Pisan Cantos, which Pound began following his arrest in Italy in May 1945, and his detainment in the American Disciplinary Training Center just north of Pisa.

In Canto LXXXIII, Pound departs from the previous cantos in which he writes about earth and air and refocuses on images of water and light. In one particular passage, Pound speaks out against the death sentence and cages for wild animals. Pound uses Chinese characters and Greek words, as he has in past cantos.
